

WASHINGTON
& JEFFERSON COLLEGE

Theatre

The Theatre program offered by the Department of Communication Arts is designed to equip students with practical skills including problem solving, communication, team-work, quick-thinking, and more that will prepare them for life and their future careers. The study of theatre includes learning many transferrable and invaluable skills that can benefit students wishing to pursue any career path or course of study.

Minor Requirements

- Introduction to Theatre (COM 102)
- 2 200-Level Courses from:
 - Acting (COM 211)
 - Stagecraft (COM 251)
 - Theatre Practicum (COM 252: taken four times)
- 2 300-Level Courses from:
 - Cultural Studies in Communication Arts (COM 321)
 - Writing for Stage and Screen (COM 351)
 - Directing and Management (COM 355)

Academic Pairings

Some academic areas that pair well with a theatre minor include:

- Psychology (counselors, drama therapy)
- Pre-Health (pediatric or family medicine)
- Business (marketing, sales, advertizing)
- History (library science, teaching, museum curation, education)
- English (teaching, writing, publishing, editing)

Benefits of a Theatre Minor

- Presentation of self and communicating narrative/stories
- Analytical skills (of texts, characters, audiences, etc.)
- Problem solving
- People skills (ability to work collaboratively with a variety of people)
- Empathy
- Understanding of different audiences
- Voice and movement (Can you control your body, especially in front of an audience? Can you safely speak to be understood?)
- Collaboration (learning to work as an ensemble)
- Turn ideas into concrete products
- Listening
- Practical design skills (how to best present a specific kind of space/location, realistically or non-realistically)
- Storytelling
- Quick-thinking and able to adapt quickly to new situations/dynamics
- Learning to hone instincts

Department Chair

Karin Maresh, Ph.D.
kmaresh@washjeff.edu

Faculty

C. Daniel Shaw, M.A.
dshaw@washjeff.edu

Beyond the Classroom

Students have many opportunities for research, internships, conferences, and networking beyond the classroom that give them an advantage to prepare for life after W&J.

Careers That Can Benefit From a Theatre Background

- Medical professions (especially careers requiring work with patients/public)
- Marketing and advertising
- Law
- Business
- Theatre and film industries (entertainment industry)
- Social justice work
- Teaching/Education
- Nonprofit companies (especially those connected to the arts)
- Wedding or event planning
- Drama therapy (connected to music and art therapy)

Journey's End

Program Website

washjeff.edu/theatre

Winter Tales

Urinetown